Four American Originals of the 20th Century - all start at 11 am

Florine Stettheimer: Icon of Jazz Age New York – Tuesday, May 7
 Norman Rockwell: An American Phenomenon – Friday, May 10
 Georgia O’Keeffe: Speaking with Color and Shapes – Tuesday, May 14
 Andy Warhol: One Singular Sensation – Friday, May 17

During the 1920s the center of the art world began shifting from Paris to New York. In this four-part series lecturer Janet Mandel will examine the fascinating lives and innovative works of four American artists who were in the vanguard of this transformation.

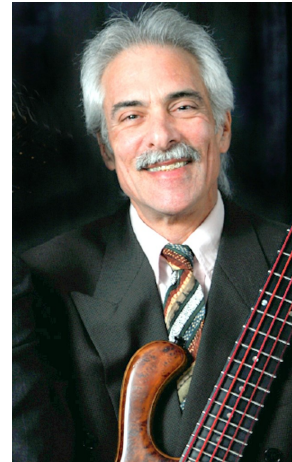

Janet Mandel taught English, Art History and World Language and Cultures in New Jersey’s public schools for 32 years. Now retired, Janet presents art history talks at libraries, museums and other venues.

How Music Works

Tuesdays, May 28; June 4, 11 & 18
10:30 am to 12 pm

Barry Wiesenfeld will present this four-part series designed to give participants a deeper understanding of music. We will touch on music history, theory and milestones of the different eras and composers who made their mark. While primarily focused on classical music, there is a significant element of jazz in the program as well, and interestingly, the parallels that exist in the two styles – a topic not often explored.

Barry Wiesenfeld is an award-winning musician, a published author, and is on the music faculty of SUNY and Ramapo College. He has accompanied Grammy-winning artists, toured internationally, and performed on numerous recordings, radio and TV.
