

Jonathan Golden is Director of the Center on Religion, Culture and Conflict at Drew University, an interdisciplinary center focused on global peacebuilding and interfaith leadership. <http://www.drew.edu/crcc/>

He also directs the program in Conflict Resolution and Leadership at Drew. Golden, who won the Thomas Kean Scholar/Mentor Award (2016), is Assistant Professor of Comparative Religion and Anthropology at Drew, where he has served since 2000. Golden has a B.A. from Brandeis University (1990) and a Ph.D. in Anthropology from the University of Pennsylvania (1998). He teaches courses on peace and conflict studies, interfaith leadership, and the Middle East. He runs the Drew Institute on Religion and Conflict Transformation, which brings together young, emerging leaders of different faiths from around the world for a three-week seminar on leadership, peacebuilding, and conflict resolution.

Golden is author of two books and numerous articles, and is currently working on two books: Turning Point, based on interviews with ex-combatants and victims of conflict that become peace activists; and as the co-author of Religion in the Classroom. Golden holds several certificates in conflict resolution and works closely with interfaith and peace organizations in NJ and around the world.

Golden lives in Florham Park, NJ with his wife, Priscilla and daughter, Lyla.